ARTIST HIGHLIGHT

MARIE LAURENCIN | 1833-1956

One of only four women whose works are in the Haggin family's collection, Marie Laurencin, like Rosa Bonheur (1822-1899), worked outside of the traditional French system for training artists. As a young woman, she studied porcelain painting at the Sèvres factory school before enrolling at the progressive Académie Humbert in Paris. Laurencin soon met fellow student Georges Braque. With Braque, Laurencin became part of the circle of artists who worked in the Bateau-Lavoir, a building dedicated to studios and living spaces for artists at the foot of Montmartre. Painters Pablo Picasso, Henri Matisse, André Derain, Raoul Dufy, and Amedeo Modigliani worked and gathered there; so did writers like Guillaume Apollinaire, Jean Cocteau, and Gertrude Stein. This heady cocktail of creativity led to Cubism. Laurencin later reflected that "the little that I learned was taught to me by those I call the great painters, my contemporaries: Matisse, Derain, Picasso, Braque."

Laurencin developed a style that was similar to early Cubist works with their shallow sense of space and flat planes of color. She exhibited with Robert Delaunay in Paris in 1912, and at the Armory Show in New York in 1913. Laurencin spent the years of World War I in Spain, where she met a number of artists who were later associated with Dada and Surrealism. During this period, her style and subject matter evolved and she became known for black-eyed female figures, alone or in pairs, often with a horse, a deer, or a dog. Laurencin's palette favored pale greens, roses, and blues.

After World War I, Laurencin returned to Paris, where she remained for the rest of her life. She enjoyed success as an avant-garde portraitist during the 1920s, painting the fashion designer Coco Chanel, among others. She exhibited interior designs at the 1925 Exposition Internationale des Arts Décoratifs et Industriels Modernes in Paris—the show that originated Art Deco design.

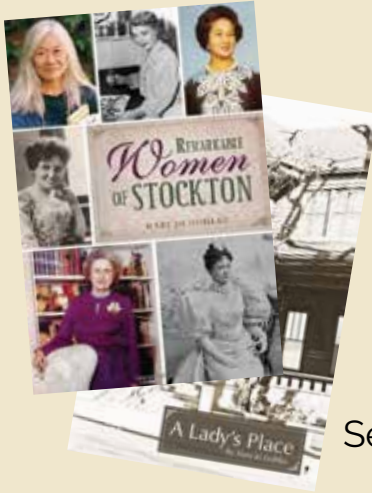

In addition to painting in oils and watercolors, Laurencin worked as an illustrator and graphic designer, creating stage designs, posters, and lithographs. She exhibited her work regularly in New York throughout the 1920s and 1930s.

American Women Artists Illuminate the Haggin Museum

August 2 – September 16, 2018

A NEW EXHIBITION AT THE HAGGIN MUSEUM titled Full Sun: American Women Artists Illuminate the Haggin Museum opens August 2, 2018 and continues through September 16. This juried show features paintings and sculptures by members of American Women Artists (AWA) influenced by a selection of paintings from the Haggin Museum's core art collection.

As the Haggin began the redesign of its core art galleries, Robin Knowlton, AWA's Executive Director and Kathy Lemke Waste, immediate past President of the AWA Board, approached the Museum with an idea to host an exhibition as a part of their 25 in 25 initiative. 25 in 25, started in 2017 by AWA, was inspired by the dismal statistics showing that work by women artists makes up only 3 - 5% of the permanent holdings of art museums in America. AWA's plan is to secure twenty-five museum exhibitions in as many years. Haggin is honored to be hosting the third scheduled show of the 25 in 25 initiative.

Full Sun: American Women Artists Illuminate the Haggin Museum celebrates a re-examination of the Haggin Family

Collection. For this exhibition, members of AWA were asked to create artwork that was inspired by a selection of 11 paintings from the Haggin Family Collection including works by William Merritt Chase, Albert Bierstadt, Rosa Bonheur, Pierre-Auguste Renoir, and other notable artists. AWA artists could take their inspiration from the artwork, the artist's greater body of work, or the theme of the painting.

NEW MUSEUM STAFF

The Haggin Museum is pleased to announce another wonderful addition to our team. Jacquelyn George has been hired as our new Collections Assistant. She will be assisting Andrea Dompe, Collections Manager, with the installation of temporary exhibitions and maintaining the Haggin Museum collections.

George received a Master of Arts in history with a concentration in public history from Arizona State University, and obtained a graduate certificate in nonprofit management from University of the Pacific. Over the past six years, she has participated in internships at six different institutions in California, Arizona, and Colorado. In her free time, George is an amateur photographer and an avid reader.

"Growing up in Lodi I never had a real appreciation for the Haggin Museum," George explained. "But after working here, even for a short time, I have come understand and value the museum's roll in Stockton and San Joaquin County. I cannot wait to help bring history and art alive to the community that is my home."

SPREAD THE WORD ABOUT THE HAGGIN

How many times have you heard that the Haggin Museum is an unsung gem or one of the best kept secrets in the area? We know that these statements are meant to be sincere compliments of our collection, programs, dedicated volunteers and the museum as a whole. However, our goal is not to be a secret, but rather to expand our reputation as a valued, vibrant and well-known educational and entertainment venue in our region.

Please help us spread the word about the museum to your friends, family, co-workers, clients and vendors. It can be as simple as bringing a friend with you the next time you visit the museum or placing a stack of museum brochures in your business. People can also visit our website at www.hagginmuseum.org and sign-up for our free e-mail newsletter which provides information about our upcoming events, programs and exhibitions.
